Instructional Strategies:

The students may be taught in the computer lab (No theory lectures in the classroom). Three students may be accommodated on one machine if enough machines are not available.

The students would be encouraged to use computerized catalogues in the library, visit cybershops or webworld etc where more practice in the skills could be practiced.

Trips to Computer centers, multimedia centers, may be arranged to see the application of software learnt.

Presentations by the experts in the field about the career opportunities in the computer field may be arranged to motivate the students and help them think seriously about their career.

Evaluation Strategy:

The students may be evaluated through practical examination, group and individual projects, oral examination and also portfolios.
